WHAT IS WATER SECURITY?
Water security is defined as the capacity of a population to safeguard sustainable access to adequate quantities of acceptable-quality water for sustaining livelihoods, human well-being and socioeconomic development, for protecting against water-borne pollution and water-related disasters, and for preserving ecosystems in a climate of peace and political stability.